UNM's Center for Development and Disability (CDD) is partnering with 11 early intervention and community providers from around the state to bring developmental training to rural communities via teleconferencing. We were awarded one of 16 grants nationally from the Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA), Office for the Advancement of Telehealth (OAT). The network, Rural Early Access to Children's Health (REACH), uses video-conferencing technology for distance education. For the 2006 seminar series, topics were identified based on input from our early intervention partners. The cost of the training and technology is covered by the grant.

Parents and community providers are welcome.
