

New Mexico Telehealth Alliance Spring Conference "TELEHEALTH IN NEW MEXICO: BRINGING INITIATIVES TOGETHER"

May 5-6, 2005

Embassy Suites Hotel • Albuquerque, NM

GOALS:

This conference will:

1. Create a platform for all participants to share the history, current status, and future applications of Telehealth in New Mexico.
2. Provide strategies for integrating effectively the emerging developments in information technologies.
3. Facilitate partnerships across a variety of organizations to share in the planning, implementation and utilization of networks thereby forming a reliable, efficient, secure and sustainable "network of networks."

OBJECTIVES:

Subsequent to attendance at the conference participants should be able to:

1. Understand the history and current status of Telehealth in New Mexico.
2. Identify the various information technologies used to provide "Telehealth" and understand the developing infrastructure to support Telehealth throughout the state.
3. Understand how Telehealth and health information technologies can be used to enhance health services.
4. Identify the programs, projects, and initiatives that use Telehealth in New Mexico.
5. Understand the value of creating a New Mexico Telehealth Alliance and public-private partnerships.
6. Understand potential opportunities for the integration of health information technologies and Telehealth in New Mexico.
7. Identify potential barriers and solutions to ensure the success of a sustainable Telehealth, health information technology system, and regional health information organization (RHIO) in New Mexico; including security, patient safety, quality of care, reimbursement, HIPAA, JCAHO, legal, liability and other operational issues.
8. Understand the Arizona Telemedicine Program as a model and how it may relate to the development of Telehealth in the Four Corners region.

TARGET AUDIENCE:

This conference is intended for medical professionals, public health specialists, health education professionals, those in the health information technology field and anyone with an interest in the promotion of health through the use of Telehealth and health information technologies in New Mexico.
